

IronMailer - your open-source Webmail solution

IronMailer is a Webmail software, working on several platforms, in several languages and ready for professional usage. It is free software in the GNU sense, see GNU philosophy. It has been in productive usage since December 2002.

Technically speaking, this software will run on any system for which Java is available, and where the system has access to an IMAP server for storing mailboxes and configurations, and to an SMTP server for sending mails. The OS doesn't matter, however GNU/Linux is recommended. On an implementation level, a strict separation of logic and presentation is pursued. Logic is implemented in Java, and presentation in XML/XSL.

For information not on this web-site, such as source code, contacts, etc., please refer to the project repository at Savannah.